My mission statement:

Recognition is an important need that lies deep within us humans. Even infants are able to recognize their mother's face and signal this recognition with facial expressions and body language. I choose to express myself figuratively, so my audience may experience the touch of recognition. All of my life I have been fascinated by how the great masters painted. For me it is natural to learn from them and build on that knowledge.

I choose to convey themes that invites to reflection. The topics I choose in my art are given to me by life itself. Through imparting what is perceived, it is easier to touch others.

I paint people's character and inner qualities, conveying the material they are made of, finding the characteristics of the persons and showing what their expressions and moods tells me. I become like a mirror to my subject, but what I paint is also a mirror for those who watch and are touched.
